MRS. JACKSON WRITES FIRST PRIZE STORY

Ray Perry and Eleanor Ruth Ahern Second and Third Winners

When decisions of the three judges in the Southtown Economist's Christmas Short Story Contest were opened Saturday night it was found that the first prize of $50 goes to Mabel Ruth Jackson (Mrs. Andrew O. Jackson), 6649 Lowe ave. Her story, "Blame It on the Pup!" is to be found on page 6 of this issue.

Second place, which carried a cash prize of $15, was given to "The First Christmas Song at Sea," written by Ray Perry, 7115 Halsted st., and third price of $10 was awarded to Eleanor Ruth Ahearn, 6452 Oakley ave. Her story she called "Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh."

"Blame It to the Pup" will be read from WBCN next Monday evening beginning at 6:30 o'clock.

It is interesting to note that the judges' opinions as to the relative worth of the stories varied to the extent that, in the scoring system used to pool their verdicts, the first prize winning story received 110 votes, the second 105, and the third 100.

Cited by the judges for honorable mention in addition to the first three were the following:

"Bill Santa Claus," by Marie Fleming, 6533 Wood st.

"The Two Christmas Presents," by Alice H. Fassett, 7133 Eggleston ave.

"As Luck Would Have It" (a Christmas story of early Englewood), by Oliver A. Linder, 6341 Parnell ave.

"The Twisted Finger," by Oma Bee, 10609 Drew st.

"Just My Man," by Minerva A. Heinbecker, 1911 W. 51st st.

"A Yukon Christmas," by Lillian F. Buckingham, 124 W. Marquette rd.

"Tom's Present," by Robert Palmer, 9617 Winchester ave.

Of the 116 manuscripts on the contest editor's desk when the closing time came at midnight last Thursday night, ninety-six had been submitted by women and girls and only twenty by those of the masculine persuasion.

While no request was made for disclosures of ages, one little story writer volunteered the information that he was 9. Four others gave their ages as 11, 12, 13 and 14 respectively—while one contestant, Mrs. Josie Weaver, 6329 Stewart ave., is 65 and her entry was the first story she had ever written. She told the tale of a Christmas of fifty years ago.

The 9-year-old is Patrick Dolan, 7717 Union ave., and he wrote of "A Granted Christmas Wish."

Judges who read the manuscripts were Mrs. J. J. Barclay of Morgan Park, Miss Louie Deupree of the Chicago Normal college, and Professor Howard Mumford Jones, head of the department of comparative literature at the University of Texas, who is now on the exchange faculty at the University of Chicago.

The latter, whose own published poetry and plays as well as his literary criticisms (many of which have been appearing recently in Chicago dailies) make his opinions of utmost value to the aspiring writer, offered a criticism of the general tenor of the stories submitted that the Economist believes its readers will be glad to receive, inasmuch as it can be constructively applied — during next year's contest possibly.

Yes, there is to be a Christmas Short Story Contest next year, in all probability. So great was the interest in this year's that the contest will likely be made an institution. And next time announcement will be made at least as early as August.

"Most of the manuscripts," Mr. Jones said, "are utterly unreal, and show a decided tendency to copy conventional Christmas fiction rather than to think up new themes.

"All the little boys sell newspapers and are the eldest sons of slaving Irish washerwomen. The first paragraphs are invariably thick with snow; and there is the usual representation of gruff, elderly gentlemen saved to humanity on Christmas eve. Dying children and thieves reprieved at the last moment by the little daughter of the house are also with us.

"These, and several more, were good themes in their day, but they have simply been worn threadbare by repeated handling."

All manuscripts where return postage was enclosed have been placed in the mail and others will be held for a short time. Their owners may secure them by calling at the Southtown Economist office, 728 W. 65th st.

TWELVE POLICEMEN STORM BARRICADE OF "CAPTAIN" DALTON

"CURIO" SHOPKEEPER CALLS POLICE ON THEFT, THEN WON'T LET THEM IN

Barricading the doors of his "curio" shop at 227 W. 63rd st. Monday morning, "Capt." Jack A. Dalton became insane and defied the Englewood police to enter as he stood on guard with a shotgun.

Dalton had complained to the police of the theft of merchandise from his store, and Sergt. Coffey was sent to investigate the complaint. When he arrived at the store the "Captain" met him with a gun in each hand and threatened to shoot. Sergeant Coffey withdrew and called the Englewood police station for reserves. In the meantime Dalton had piled cases and books about the front and back doors of the store.

Captain Michael Lee ordered a dozen officers to the scene, and while some stood outside to prevent pedestrians from being shot should the "Captain" fire through the front window, the rest of the detail broke in the back door and placed him under arrest.

He had "cleared the decks for war," and on searching the place the police found two small boys hid under a mattress. They told the police that they worked for Dalton and received books in pay. They were turned over to their parents.

Complaints have often been made in regard to Dalton's practice of harboring children in the store, and many attempts have been made to evict him from the premises. According to the police, he was recently released from an asylum for the insane, where he had been confined for four years.

Judge Francis B. Allegretti ordered him sent to the psychopathic hospital for examination Tuesday when he was arraigned in the Grand Crossing court on a disorderly conduct charge. Should he be found sane, he will be tried January 9.

PARK MANOR MAKES KIDS' SKATING POND

The Park Manor Improvement association is going to see that the kiddies in the neighborhood have their fun.

Last fall, while th leaves were still green on the trees, they brought up the question of a skating pond—a facility the district was entirely lacking since it has no city park—and a space on the west side of South Park ave. next to 72nd st. was embanked, at the cost of $100 to the association. The land belongs to the board of education.

With the coming of freezing weather, the place was flooded last Friday and now skaters are keeping it busy.

It is possible that after the first of the year, if there is sufficient snow to use for banking purposes, a second pond will be made at 68th and Calumet. Permission to use the land has already been secured, said M. J. Connelly, president of the association.

$10,000 LOOT IN STRATFORD SHOP HOLDUP

Proprietor and Clerk Are Bound With Belts From Dresses

Fur coats and dresses, valued at over $10,000 were stolen Saturday morning by three daylight bandits who held up the Stratford Cloak shop, 701 W. 63rd st., and after binding the proprietor, Hyman Segamsky, 909 E. 54th st., and a clerk, walked out with their loot over their arms.

For nearly a half hour the victims remained helpless, bound hand and foot, behind the show cases where they had been stowed, until they were rescued by a customer.

The robbery occurred shortly after 10 o'clock and while the robbers were in the store the passing of a policeman on his beat was remarked by the thieves.

Segamsky and Mrs. Selma Cloonan, 5637 Langley ave., a clerk, were in the store. One of the bandits entered alone. Apparently he was familiar with the place as his first question to Segamsky, after forcing him to hold up his hands at the point of a gun, was to ask where the proprietor's wife was. Mrs. Segamsky is usually at the store and the bandit seemed fearful that she had seen him enter and had fled to notify the police. When he had made certain that she was not there his two companions joined him.

The victims' hands and feet were then bound with belts from cheaper dresses and they were put behind the show cases. The value of the merchandise was known by the bandits for all the less expensive garments were shunned. A total of 147 dresses and 21 coats were taken.

As the bandits made ready to leave they noticed Officer George Tucker passing by. He walked east on 63rd st. and they waited until he was a short distance away, then fled.

Segamsky and Mrs. Cloonan were released from their bindings by Mrs. Helen Johnson, 1653 W. 89th st., who came into the store to make some purchases.

The half hour interval allowed the bandits to make a good "get away" and they have not yet been apprehended. Officer Tucker reported that he had glanced in the store as he passed but was able to see nothing because the door window was partially covered by frost. He noticed a car parked at the curb and it is believed that the bandits made their escape in this car.

SLEET MAKES CAR STRIKE, KILL WOMAN

Mrs. Charlotte Larson, 5831 Emerald ave., was fatally injured Tuesday night of last week when she was struck by an automobile while crossing Marquette blvd. at Lowe ave. Her life was added to the toll of the icy streets as Frank M. Walsh, 328 E. 70th st., the driver, was unable to stop his machine in time to prevent striking her because of the condition of the pavement.

Albert Wrobleski, 7119 Western ave., who was passing at the time in his machine took the woman to St. Bernard's hospital where she died three hours after the accident.

Walsh was taken into custody by the Englewood police but was released when the coroner's jury incorporated in their verdict that he was not criminally responsible.

TO LIGHT MANY CANDLES AT UNIQUE CHURCH SERVICE

Several hundred candles will be used to symbolize the coming of the Christ child and the change his presence wrought on the earth at the unique candle lighting service to be held at 7:45 o'clock Sunday evening, December 28, at the Auburn Park Methodist church, 75th and Harvard.

THIRD JEWELRY STORE HOLDUP NETS BANDITS $8,000 GEMS, WATCHES

TROCKY BOUND WHILE MASKED MEN RIFLE SAFE AND SHOWCASES

A third of the pre-Christmas jewelry store robberies in central Englewood occurred Tuesday morning when two masked bandits entered Trocky's jewelry store at 6209 Halsted st., bound the proprietor and clerk, rifled the safe and made their escape with gems and watches valued at $8,000.

The first of the two previous robberies within the last month was staged at the Maremont Jewel shop, 6319 Halsted st., where a visiting salesman was robbed of $100,000 worth of sample jewelry, and the second at the Olsen & Ebann store, 6520 Halsted st., where a loot valued at $50,000 was obtained.

The holdup at Trocky's occurred while scores of early shoppers were passing the store. Both of the bandits were armed with blue steel automatic revolvers and had their faces covered with handkerchiefs. Samuel Trocky, the proprietor, was forced to open the safe, and then he and Leon Kronberg, an employee, were taken into a back room and bound with rope that the robbers carried.

A large stock of diamond rings and watches was crammed into the thieves' pockets before they left. Trocky was able to release himself from his bindings within a few minutes, but by the time he was free the bandits were gone from sight.

Trocky's place was robbed early last spring, when the loss was $5,000.

COMMONWEALTH TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK OPENS NEW BUILDING

THOUSANDS VISIT INSTITUTION SATURDAY AT WENTWORTH AVE. AND 69TH ST.

Visitors totaling more than 10,000 men and women inspected the new home of the Commonwealth Trust and Savings bank, at Wentworth ave. and 69th st., Saturday from 9 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night.

The first day's business consisted of 600 new accounts. Floral pieces of elaborate design, representing $1,000 worth of blooms, filled the corridors. An orchestra played day and evening.

Cigars and 5,000 roses were presented to the visitors. Oiled paper rain hoods to protect women's hats were given away. The reception committee, including officers of the bank, consisted of Ernest E. Hart, president; Edward B. Lucius, vice-president; Russell L. Blount, cashier and vice-president; and George V. Olson, assistant cashier.

Directors who welcomed friends and patrons were Joseph Dimond, R. C. Foster, Charles R. Fuller, Edgar James, Cornelius S. Kelly, James F. McGlone, E. A. Rysdon, W. F. Voight, and Frank C. Weber.

Since April, 1919, the bank had been located in a building at 75th st. and Vincennes ave., measuring 20 by 50 feet. Its business increased until the quarters no longer accommodated the growth of the institution. During the last year the volume of busines has doubled. The former capital of $100,000 has become $200,000 now, and the surplus of $20,000 has grown to $75,000, Mr. Blount stated Tuesday.

The present bank building is considered one of the finest in the city and has been built of terra cotta, with Corinthian pillars at the entrance and an Italian marble interior. The floors are of terrazza. A skylight occupying four-fifths of the roof lights the place in the daytime, and at night 100 electric lights concealed above it give illumination.

A special ventilation system of fans above the roof keeps the air fresh. The structure's dimensions are 40x145 feet. There are three vaults and 4,000 safety deposit boxes. A door weighing sixteen tons closes the vault and is large enough for use in a $10,000,000 bank, according to the cashier.

Incident to its removal, the bank practically doubled its staff of employes. The twelve booths in the bank are of plate glass, supplanting the old-fashioned metal cages.

1,000 ATTEND PRIZE DRAWING IN NORMAL BUSINESS FESTIVAL

ASSOCIATION IS WELL PLEASED WITH OUTCOME OF FIRST CELEBRATION

More than 1,000 people were present Monday afternoon at the E. A. R. theater, 69th st. and Wentworth ave., when 525 prizes, donated by Normal Park business for the success of the Normal Park business festival week, December 15 to 20, were drawn.

As a feature of the week coupons had been given purchasers from stores in the district which entitled the buyers to a chance to win one of the many awards.

This is the first year that such a celebration has been attempted in the section. Members of the Normal Park Business Mens association, under whose auspices the festival was held, were so well satisfied with the outcome that they hope to repeat the plan at least once a year, according to officials of the organization.

The idea back of the occasion was to educate members of the section to "buy at home." Merchants sold much of their stock at cost, and each one donated liberally to the free prizes. Articles as vacuum cleaners and bridge lamps costing as much as $50 we given away.

Monday evening, December 15, the organization held a parade, with bands, floats and decorated automobiles, through Normal Park and the surrounding district. Throughout the week there were special lighting effects, and the stores were decorated with flags and bunting. Many of the window displays were unusually attractive.

BOY OF 16 VICTIM OF AUTO ACCIDENT

The victim of an accident in which he was crushed between a water plug and an automobile, Alfred Volpin, 16, died shortly after he was taken to the Washington Park hospital.

The accident occurred at 1 o'clock Sunday morning at 60th st. and Cottage Grove ave. Volpin had attended a show at the Tivoli theater with two boy friends, and they were on their way home when the car skidded and, turning completely around, bumped against a water plug at the curbing. The boy who had planned to take the wheel a few blocks further on, was standing on the running board next to the driver and was badly crushed.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Volpin, 6921 Halsted st., and there is one sister, Violet. The funeral was held from St. John the Baptist church at 8:30 o'clock this morning, Wednesday, where the Rev. Father Henein officiated. Interment was made in the Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

THREE STORE TRUCK DRIVERS HELD UP

Drivers for loop department stores were the victims of bandits who obtained a total of over $300 in three holdups. Jacob Mendelsohn, 3525 Wood st., employed by the Davis Dry Goods company, lost $19 to a pair of thieves who forced him to hand over his collections at 56th and Green sts. late Thursday afternoon.

Thought to be the same pair, two armed holdup men, took nearly $200 from William Korsek, 1275 W. 72nd st., whom they robbed earlier in the afternoon in the rear of 7025 Morgan st.

Clarence Malquist, 7615 Michigan ave., a driver for the Fair store, was robbed of nearly $100 in cash and $15 in checks by two armed bandits who boarded his truck in front of 7116 Harvard ave. Friday evening and held him up.

ENGLEWOOD HIGH HAS HONEST-TO-GOODNESS FIRE DRILL FRIDAY

BLAZE STARTS STUDENTS' HOLIDAYS THREE HOURS EARLY; $400 LOSS

Without excitement, more than three thousand students at the Englewood high school marched out of the building Friday noon when the fire alarm was rung after a small blaze had been discovered in a class room adjacent to the office of Principal James E. Armstrong.

Defective wiring is believed to have caused the fire. It gained headway between the floor and the basement ceiling while the room was vacant during the lunch period. Smoke had been smelled by the office employees but the fire was not discovered until Harry H. Hornstein, teacher of the bookkeeping classes in the room, returnd.

A fire alarm was turned in and the bell for a fire drill was rung. The pupils, more than half of whom were in the hall on their lunch recess, started to file out of the building in orderly fashion, none realizing that the alarm was real. However, some student learned of the fire and pulled one of the switches on the second floor, causing the bells and sirens to sound continuously.

This continued ringing indicated to most of the students that the alarm was not merely for practice but there was no excitement or confusion. All left the building without mishap.

The fire was quickly put under control by the firemen and was extinguished with a loss of only about $400. The students were forced to stand in the cold for only a few minutes for when Principal Armstrong learned the extent of the fire he permitted them to re-enter the building and get their coats from lockers. School was then dismissed over three hours earlier than the regular time.

REIGN OF KING CHRISTMAS NOT OPPOSED HERE

Holiday Community Activities Center Around Churches

All other activities are being sidetracked this week to make way for the Christmas festivities. Young folks are home from colleges and universities and many parties are being planned, while there are numerous dinner parties of families and friends scheduled for Christmas day.

With all the schools ending their observances last week, neighborhood holiday activities, with a few exceptions, center about the churches this week.

Outdoor Tree

Hamilton park is the scene of a number of Christmas parties. For the first time a huge tree has been erected in the wading pool. This tree is thirty feet in height and is illuminated with scores of colored electric globes. It will be sprayed and the icicles will make natural ornaments. Inside the field house another large tree has been erected and trimmed.

Parties for the children of the gymnasium classes have been held throughout the week. Wednesday afternoon the women of the afternoon gymnasium classes will stage an entertainment and on Friday afternoon the children's chorus will have a party.

Mistletoe lodge of the Sons of St. George will give a Christmas dance Saturday evening. Monday afternoon members of the Gresham Women's club will be hostesses at the children's party and the Hamilton Park Women's club will give a similar entertainment Wednesday afternoon.

Chorus to Give Cantata

The feature of the holiday program will be the presentation of the cantata, "The Angel and the Star," Sunday afternoon by the chorus of the Hamilton Park Women's club of fifty voices.

At Ogden park the Christmas party for the children in the gymnasium and the clubs at the fieldhouse will be given at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, December 27. The following program has been arranged: Vocal solo, "The Lazy Daisy," dance and song, Edward and Rita Oehman; sailors' hornpipe and "Doodle Doo" song, Peggy Price; reading; acrobatic jazz, Edith Berg; Aesthetic, Elsie Kubes; individual number, Edward Oehman; individual number, Rita Oehman; clog dance, Peggy Price; violin; bowery number, Elsie Kubes and Edith Berg. Mr. Levine has also promised some special numbers from the National theater.

John Bain, president of the West Englewood Trust and Savings bank, has made it possible for Santa Claus to visit all the children in the regular classes at the park.

At Ogden the children's chorus of the Civic Music association gave a Christmas program Tuesday evening.

Many of the churches in the vicinity are holding a devotional service on Christmas day and all of them are having a Sunday school program early in the holiday week.

The spirit of giving, in gifts of substance, self, and service, is the underlying theme in the majority of the Sunday school festivals. Pageants and tableaux with elaborate costumes, music, decorations, and lighting effects constitute most of the programs.

Though a complete story would be impossible, the observances at a number of the churches are told of here in some detail.

Close Attendance Contest

Speaking at the Christmas festival in the Bishop Cheney Memorial church, 70th st. and Yale ave., Sunday afternoon, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, head of the Chicago Health department, chose as his subject, "The Birth of Christ Brought Life and Health Into the World." Sunday marked the close of an attendance contest between the Bishop Cheney Memorial church of Chicago and Christ church of Toronto, Can. The latter was in the lead by thirty-nine last week. Average attendance at the local church Sunday shows an increase of fifty persons.

Christmas anthems were sung by the choir assisted by Mrs. McAlister Knapp and Gilbert Collingwood at the morning service Sunday.

The Christmas song service will be repeated at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. Dr. W. B. Norton, a traveler in the Orient and religious editor of the Chicago Daily Tribune, will speak on "Ghandi, a Mystic Nationalist World Leader: His Unique Message." Sunday school will be held at 9:30 o'clock and the young people will hold a rally at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Present Two Plays

"Christmas Every Day" and "The Minister's Daughter" are the two plays to be presented by the Sunday school at 7:45 o'clock tonight, Wednesday evening. The department will have a Christmas tree. The Christian Endeavor will hold a Christmas service at 7 o'clock with George Stout in charge.

Midnight services will be held at St. Bartholomew's church, Stewart ave. and Normal pkwy. Christmas Eve, beginning at 11:30 o'clock. The choir will sing Bruno's "Mass" and "The Heavens Are Telling" by Haydn. The anthems Christmas morning at 10:30 o'clock will be "Brightest and Best of the Sons of Tomorrow" by Hanscom.

Donations of food will be made to the orphanage at Nachusa, Ill., by the congregation of the Augsburg English Lutheran church, 73rd st. and Wabash ave., during the Christmas season. A sermon will be preached at 10 o'clock Thursday morning by the pastor, the Rev. G. E. Sheffer, on "God's Greatest Gift to Man." The choir, directed by Miss Maude Fuder, will ring special numbers.

There's Wisdom in Looking Ahead!
Shortly after the first of December a lot of people received nice fat checks from their Christmas Savings Club accounts at the Halsted Street Bank. They were wise enough to look ahead and will be ready to buy the things they really want to give, without having to skimp to do it.
If you have been trusting to luck to carry you over this year, you will no doubt find yourself not quite ready to buy the presents you have in mind. Better take that little experience to heart, and begin to get in shape for next Christmas. Just a little money each pay placed in our Christmas Savings Club will bring you enough in happiness to make the effort worth while.
Join our Christmas Savings Club this pay day; your wisdom will be apparent next Christmas.

SHORT STORY CONTEST WINNERS

She wrote nearly all of it in one day—all but the first two pages—Mrs. Andrew O. Jackson, 6649 Lowe ave., winner of the first prize in the Economist's Short Story Contest, rather chamefacedly admitted.

And her husband and red headed son, Richard, who is a student at Parker high school, had on their overcoats and hats while she typed the finale and rushed it down to the Economist office just in time to get it under the tape before the closing whistle blew, figuratively speaking, at midnight Thursday.

But she wouldn't advise other people who want contest prizes to do that way, Mrs. Jackson laughed, as she said she thought another revision would have materially helped the production. Read it in this week's issue and decide for yourself.

Mrs. Jackson has sold several short stories to Chicago newspaper syndicates and has been active in the literary work of the Hamilton Park Woman's club. She is a member of the Illinois Woman's Press association. The Jacksons have lived in Hamilton Park for fourteen years and both Mr. and Mrs. Jackson have been among the leaders of the Hamilton Park Players, a dramatic group that just staged a production at the field house.

Ray Perry, whose story, "The First Christmas Song at Sea," was accorded second prize, is one of Englewood's "native sons." He lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Perry, at 7115 Halsted st. and is a graduate of St. Bernard's school, later taking a commercial course at De LaSalle university and then studying journalism and short story writing at DePaul and the Mayo Federated colleges.

Enlisting in the navy in 1917, Mr. Perry served first as a seaman and then as a radio operator on the U. S. North Dakota. It was his experiences there that furnished the background for his story.

His "dabbling," to use his term, in the writing field has been much interrupted by illness. Mr. Perry is now a rate clerk for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois at 6600 Union ave.

The encouragement it has given her to go on with her literary efforts makes the 18-year-old winner of the third prize extremely happy over the circumstance. Miss Eleanor Ruth Ahern has been "exposed" to writers through her stenographic work during the past two years in the editorial office of the Woman's Weekly and in a newspaper representative's office.

She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Ahern, 6452 Oakley ave., a graduate of Visitation academy, and has lived in West Englewood all of her life

Without doubt beauty is to be found everywhere; but it needs an artist to see it, and to understand it.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

It is the year's "glad" season. All the boys and girls of the land are eager and excited and happy, and older folk, with the exception of an occasional unregenerate Old Scrooge, are entering into the youthful joyousness of heart that is everywhere. All week Christmas tree candles have been blinking from front windows and last minute shoppers have been hurrying down the street with bundle-laden arms. It is an old, old story, this Christmas observance, as old as the story of the shepherds that watched their flocks on the hillside, yet a story that will yearly become new and interesting as long as there are little children, and love, and good fellowship in the world. In spite of the cynic, in spite of selfishness and hatred, poverty and crime, and in spite of the gift-trader who does all he can to wreck it through his crass commercialism and his giverless donations of duty, the Spirit of Christmas is resurrected again and again year after year to cast a beneficient smile, the warmth of which is not entirely lost throughout the year.

The Southtown Economist believes in Christmas. Let us wish for you and your family and friends that Christmas, 1924, will be the very happiest that you have ever experienced.

WHERE ARE THOSE SKATES?

Later in the season than usual, skating weather is at last with us. The park lagoons are in condition and of mornings, now that school isn't "keeping," little boys are seen sprawling over the ice, while afternoons and evenings find the ponds filled with older boys and girls and men and women. They have hilarious times, for the tingling cold and the swift skimming over the ice combine to send the blood coursing through the veins and lend an intoxication that even the fabled elixirs of the gods were incapable of bestowing.

It's a pity a larger portion of Southtown's population doesn't know the invigorating pleasure to be had from an hour's ice skating. In Scandinavian countries some of the biggest of the year's festivities are held on the ice and no one but cripples and infants fails to don skates. But with frozen stretches and nipping winds and heavy sweaters inviting us, inadequately garbed we shiver along the streets and gladly get indoors at the earliest possibility to take our pleasures from mah jongg or cards around a fire, and get our exercise from dancing in an overheated room.

We've become soft, or perhaps we are laboring under the delusion that exercise in the winter open air is bad for our constitutions.

To be sure, Southtown is handicapped by a shortage of skating facilities if she should decide to stage a comeback in popularity for the red-blooded sport. The park lagoons are crowded now. But there are plenty of open lots that could be flooded at a minimum of cost. The Park Manor district is removed even from the lagoons that those in the neighborhood of Ogden, Hamilton, Ridge and the other parks enjoy.

Early in the fall the section's improvement association took the question under consideration and spent $100 embanking the board of education land on the west side of South Park ave. from 72nd st. to the middle of the block. Friday it was flooded and now the boys and girls are having the time of their lives there, without mothers worrying to have them travel to the other side of town. And not infrequently do the older folk join them. Let's arrange our ponds, and then let's use them.

CHRISTMAS TREES

The tragedy of Christmas—the poor little dismantled tree that, browned and shattering, greets the New Year from a waste heap in the alley or a-top the stack of kindling wood by the furnace in the basement! Who hasn't, at some time, experienced a sympathetic heart-throb for the little celebrator whose glory was so short-lived? And perhaps it is this sympathy that is responsible for the present discussion of abolishing the Christmas tree custom. The question is whether the benefits from the time-honored institution are great enough to offset the waste that results from the cutting of five million young trees each year in the United States alone, to be decked with tinsel and candles and gifts and form the center for holiday celebrations in as many homes and churches and schools.

"The custom is so old, so well-grounded, and so venerated," reads the formal statement of the United States forest service on the question, "that, even if it were economically somewhat indefensible, these aspects will and should continue to outweigh economic considerations."

"Well-grounded" and "venerated" indeed is the Christmas tree. We all remember, from our childhood story books, of the Esquimau group that had learned of the Christmas custom and, lacking a tree, substituted a whalebone framework. And the writer knew of a schoolteacher in a barren western Kansas district where sagebrush was, and evergreens were not, who gave her pupils a memorable celebration by decking the ribs of an old umbrella with green crepe paper. Should we attempt to dispense with our trees, how successful would we be?

But how important is it that we should? Ralph S. Hosmer, professor of forestry at Cornell university, has furnished some interesting statistics. He tells us that as trees are usually spaced for forest plantations, an acre will harbor 1,210 trees. Five million trees would, then, require 4,132 acres. Allowing for the fact that nature may not space so closely, he is willing to double the amount and add a little more for good measure, estimating that 10,000 acres are cut clear each year for Christmas trees. But the United States forest service has stated that our remaining forests are being cut at the rate of ten million acres per year—that is, one-tenth of one per cent of the forest drain is going for Christmas trees.

"As a matter of fact," writes Professor Hosmer, "on most of the land from which spruces and firs are cut, the forest readily replaces itself through natural regeneration. Much of the Christmas tree stock that goes to the Atlantic seaboard cities comes from land that has reverted to forests, or from swampy areas and balsam thickets, or results from the cuttings that farmers make to keep their pastures open for grazing. Frequently the best, often the only, market afforded for the small conifers so removed is as Christmas trees. True conservation of the forest results not from leaving trees to grow old and die, but from their wise use when they are needed, in whatever size by man. Under proper forest management one crop of trees is made to succeed another."

Shall we have Christmas trees next year, or not? The Economist would be interested in hearing the opinions of its readers.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

"—WE JUST HAVE TO get something for Edith! You know, just any little thing—she gave US something last year. But I don't want to spend over a dollar on her. You know, it isn't the cost of a gift, but the loving thought behind it that counts—"

THE WILL OF A WALL STREET CYNIC—

"To my wife, I leave her lover and the knowledge that I wasn't the fool she thought I was.

"To my son, I leave the pleasure of earning a living. For thirty-five years he has thought the pleasure mine. He was mistaken.

"To my daughter I leave $100,000. She will need it. The only good piece of business her husband ever did was to marry her.

"To my valet, I leave the clothes he has been stealing from me regularly, for the past ten years. Also the fur coat that he wore last winter when I was South.

"To my chauffeur, I leave my cars. He almost ruined them, and I want him to have the satisfaction of completing the job.

"To my partner, I leave the suggestion that he take some other clever man with him at once if he expects to remain in business."

"HI LO," another new contributor, says of the following excerpt from a loop newsheet, that you might call it the height of bravery.

IN WHICH HENRY GETS BAWLED OUT

Dear Finney: How are the mighty fallen! Did you read the first two blurbs of H. L. Mencken's in the Suday W. G. N.? I looked forward to his debut with keen anticipation. But alas! it was as though I had awaited the serving of a well tabasceed hot tamale, only to be anti-climaxed by the substitution of a Child's flapjack! The Sage of Oystertown's article sounded like a combination of Horace Greeley's "go west" advice, a Frankerane banality, and all neatly bound in the staid covers of the w. k. americanmagazine. Thus do the gods succumb to the wiles of the plutocratic press!

MRS. MAIMIE WESSEL, confined to her bed for the last two years, writes to CRAZY QUILT to voice her appreciation of the broadcasting of this column last Tuesday night. Glad you liked it, Mrs. Wessel. PARIS Dec. 9—Unlike the on time popular air which sang of a little bit off the top it is now a little bit on the top This with reference to hats, of course, for you have no doubt already noted a tendency to a little make-weight crowning the newest Paris models

You may have a quaint pompon sitting comfortably on your topmost point, or you are bowed like an expensive box of chocolates You may, of course, have neither of these, but whichever way it is, the top of your head must be interesting

Two Agnes hats pictured present top-knot suggestions The first reached a millinery summit by way of black satin ribbon which ends in an amusing bunch White fur is lifted into black velvet Vs for the second model

And now says the illustration, we come to gloves When evening gloves are worn they are usually of cream suede and are often embroidered The example illustrated is of this soft skin and is decorated with embroidered tulle

There are not Christmas tree suspensions—but just a few suggestions for the party season.

Should you desire something youthful for dinner and dance. Patou presents a charming model in marron (chestnut) velvet with lace yoke and side skirt fullness of marron and silver lace edged with skunk

There is a fascinating necklace to match this odd, too. It is of old red beads weighted with a piece of jade and a brown tassel

Perhaps, however, you would be slender as a lily, and then Lanvin's model will aid you. For this, white satin is embroidered with diamonds of black composition and outlined with blue beads light at the top and gradually darkening toward the hem The side pieces of turquoise velvet are interesting and rather a help to the too slim figure

Being the gay season you may wish to sprinkle Then choose Bechoff's model of delightfully glinting gold rose and blue beads over a foundation of perwinkle blue velvet

The next two models are from Julette Comtesse One is of soft white satin with scallop and oval insets of black lace

MERRY CHRISTMAS

I am not going to write a lengthy article for this edition, because I am pretty sure that you won't have much time to read it By this time you are probably making your last hurried shopping trips to the stores or perhaps putting the finishing touches to the decorations of your home for the holiday and have no thought of yourself or your beauty.

There is no use in my asking you to give up all this hurry and flurry and work, for it is all part and parcel of the Christmas spirit and we love it, especially we women, as much as we love the holiday itself—but I am going to ask you to try to finish in time so that you may spend a little time on yourself and not be haggard and worn out on Christmas.

Do not spend all of your energy in beautifying the house and your surroundings You owe it to yourself and your family to be beautiful also on Christmas day, and free from any effect of the pre-holiday strain. See that your hair is clean and attractively dressed, and treat yourself to a facial massage to iron out any wrinkles you have accumulated and soothe the tired muscles. Spend a little time on your poor tired feet, which have borne the hardest burden, and make your hands and nails pretty and well groomed. Thus your family will doubly appreciate you and it will indeed be a merry feast for you

Gelda—Every one owes it to her scalp to give it a hot oil shampoo about every six weeks, even though it be perfectly healthy. The hot oil acts as a physic to the cells and purges them of all impurities and sebaceous matter This produces a healthy circulation and normal flow of oil, making the hair luxuriant and helping in its growth. There is oil especially suitable for extreme dryness and another for extreme oiliness of the hair Either, if used correctly and consistently, will restore the scalp to proper condition.

E M. A—A cleansing cream with a lemon base would be ideal for your skin and would gradually bleach it. Also since your skin is inclined to be over-oily, the lemon content in the cream would act as a mild astringent However, I would advise the use of a good astringent after cleansing the face and before applying powder. This will counteract the oil and tend to shrink the enlarged pores

G N M—There is occasionally a case where obesity does not bow under the starvation treatment, but these cases are very rare. When this does happen, however, you may readily know that it is the fault of the thyroid apparatus and no one can help you but a physician After a thorough examination, if he is certain that it will have no harmful effect upon your system, he will prescribe the proper medicine for you.

Anna—Water waving is most successful in naturally curly hair or hair that has been permanently waved—however, there is some straight hair which responds to it very nicely

Scalloped Rice and Cheese

After a heavy dinner of fowl dressing, pastry sauces and nuts, a simple dish makes a palatable change in the holiday menu Combine 3 cups rice, 4 tablespoons fat 4 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt 2 cups milk and 1 cup grated cheese

Make a white sauce of fat, flour and salt. Next cover the bottom of a buttered dish with rice, then onto it sprinkle cheese and spread a layer of white sauce. Repeat the process, using remaining ingredients and cover the top layer with buttered crumbs Bake in a moderate oven until the crumbs are browned The buttered crumbs consist of 1 tablespoon of melted fat to which 1 cup of crumbs are added and mixed thoroughly.—Miss E Frasher, 6453 Laflin st.

YOUR HOME'S INTERIOR

KITCHEN WINDOW CURTAINS

G. M. Tencate

Any room in which a woman must necessarily spend as much time as she who presides over the kitchen does there deserves the best of equipment Much thought is given in modern architecture and plumbing to the details that make a sanitary and convenient kitchen possible. Lighting is still more or less the housewife's problem, an important one because the condition of one's eyes ddepends greatly on the restfulness of the surrounddings.

Kitchen windows are a lighting center that must be given careful consideration Durable curtains of scrim, grenadine, voile or marquisette will provide a protection against the sunny glare and at the same time withstand steam vapors. The material used enables the housekeeper to wash the curtains as frequently as they require without damage to the design.

A shirred valance of blue checked gingham used with white ruffled curtains and tie-backs fashioned from gingham will serve to give the kitchen a cheerful appearance. Heavy materials in dark tones make the kitchen look small, exclude light and detract from the room's daintiness.

BLAME IT ON THE PUP!

Being the Story that Won First Prize in the Economist's Contest

-- By Mabel Ruth Jackson --

HE was just a little, timid dog looking for any crumbs of kindness that might chance to fall his way. Lewis Reynolds first noticed that the dog was following him when he stopped at the boulevard, waiting a chance to get across.

Glancing down, he spied the small, disreputable looking animal at his heels. He turned sharply, frowned and said sternly: "Go home!" The puppy wagged his ridiculous tail and looked pleased. Lewis turned back toward the boulevard again. The steady stream of cars seemed to have thinned for a moment and he started across. The little dog hopefully started, too. Just then a car unexpectedly swung around the corner and if Lewis had not stepped back the second he did the death dial in the Tribune would undoubtedly have added another number to its long and growing list of automobile victims.

As it was, Lewis landed heavily on a grimy paw of the dog. The little creature gave a yelp of pain and Lewis, with an involuntary exclamation of concern, picked him up and stepped back on the curb.

What to do with him? One paw hung limp and useless. Lewis couldn't decently abandon him there on the street. And yet—he would be late for the office as it was. Why couldn't he leave the dog and go on his way? It wasn't his fault that the small tramp had followed him. But some warm feeling, not yet smothered by indifference, forbade this desertion.

Several children from a near-by flat building had gathered around him by this time, eager for any excitement. "Say, mister," piped a small boy, "they's a dog hospital 'round th' corner an' down th' street! They's 'nawful good doctor there'll cure your dog's foot."

A larger girl importantly elbowed him aside. "I'll show you where it is, mister," she announced, leading the way, and Lewis Reynolds, to his own surprise, found himself meekly following his youthful guide.

He left the puppy with the veterinarian, and with a sigh of relief resumed his interrupted journey officewards. A chorus of hoots greeted him as he entered the door. "Late again! Don't you know you were late last year?" . . . "How can we set our watches by you if you start acting this way?" . . . "Hush! he's been doing his Christmas shopping early!"

He forced a smile for the badinage but his heart was not in it. "Christmas shopping!" What painful memories entwined themselves with the pregnant phrase. "Christmas shopping—and Norma." That was what it had been last year. Then his heart wasn't the cold and heavy weight he felt it now, but light and joyous. Norma . . . He used to say the name lingeringly, seeing the beloved owner as clearly as though she stood before him—clear, frank hazel eyes with curving lashes, a small rounded chin that just fit the hollow of one's hand, smooth, creamy cheeks and a tender mouth—

Lewis shut his teeth hard on his lower lip and stared straight ahead for a moment. This was what Christmas did! For nearly a year now he had been sedulously building layers of ice around his heart, trying to forget, trying to be indifferent. He had thought that he had succeeded fairly well but now his hardly gained callousness seemed threatened It was all the fault of that little cur, he thought, calling it "cur" in his mind in an endeavor to banish any solicitude. He would pay the vet's bill and tell him to do with the dog in any way he saw fit. An unbidden thought came into his mind—Norma used to like dogs. She liked kittens, too, and birds and little children. Her heart was big enough for all—for all but him.

This would never do. Lewis pulled himself together and plunged into his work with a fierce abandon that crowded out troublesome thoughts.

BUT lunch time, walking down State st., the curbstone hawkers with their mechanical toys, the Salvation Army workers ringing bells on the corners and the laden with holly boxes, fresh reminders of the year the big stores were beautiked with tinsel and silver and green. Crowds of children were gathered ...acious corner windows ...he huge department ...a minute to watch the big toy elephant swing his trunk in a truly life-like manner. Santa in a sleigh gripped firmly the reins of his mettlesome steeds. Lewis could almost fancy him shouting: "Come, Dasher! On, Donder and Blitzen! To the top of the roofs! To the top of the wall! Come, dash away, dash away, dash away all!"

It hadn't been so many years since he himself had been a boy, longing for some real racer skates and boxing gloves and a coaster sled. He found himself smiling in sympathy with that boy. He had discovered the skates wrapped in red tissue paper and sealed with Christmas stickers, lying with other gifts in his particular chair that Christmas morning. And that afternoon he had called for Norma and they had gone skating on the lagoon. The rest of the crowd had always taken it for granted that Lewis and Norma would pair off together. Their friendship had started when they were both "freshies" at high school. And they had never had a quarrel until last Christmas Eve. Of course, they had had numerous differences of opinion and good-natured arguments. It would have been terribly monotonous, as Norma laughingly declared, to always agree with each other. But there was no room for argument over their devotion to each other. Lewis had been as sure of Norma's love as he was of his own.

"Ooh! lookit, mother!" exclaimed a small boy near him, "see that little dog, mother! Is he real?"

Lewis looked where the childish finger pointed. A smart fox terrier was sitting beside Santa and so real was the resemblance that Lewis almost looked for the tail to wag and hear him bark at the reindeer. Immediately he thought of the little pup of his morning's adventure.

He found himself wondering how the little fellow was getting on. When he was a boy he had always wanted a dog, but dogs in apartments are distinctly not wanted, and by the time his family had acquired a house he was grown and thinking of other things.

He sighed a little, reached for his watch, and, seeing the time, hurried back to the office. How had he come to stand so long, daydreaming before a toy window!

But he found that he could not so easily dismiss a feeling of responsibility for the stray pup and so he paid the dog hospital a visit that evening. The little dog's joy at seeing him was pathetic and Lewis couldn't help feeling rather gratified at the display of affection. It seemed to leave a warm spot in his heart all the next day and in the evening his mother was agreeably surprised to see him return in a short time from his usual after-dinner walk. She had dreaded these long walks. Lewis would come in, his face white and stern, showing traces of the mental suffering he had endured. Her mother heart ached for him but she could not force his confidence and he had withheld it from her, shutting himself out from all sympathy.

She had never known what the trouble had been between Lewis and Norma. Lewis had simply and curtly announced, last Christmas, when she had wondered why he wasn't at Norma's, that their engagement was broken and he would rather not talk about it.

The young people had gone their own ways. Lewis had refused all invitations out, but Norma, from being somewhat of a home-loving girl, had taken to going out constantly. She had danced and laughed and smeared her pretty lips with carmine. Lewis had hated the lavish application of cosmetics which made some of the girls look like caricatures of themselves and Norma had seemed to agree with him. But this last year she had acted contrary to all her previous standards. Mrs. Reynolds guessed that under her gay exterior she carried as sore a heart as Lewis's.

LEWIS came in now and hung his wet hat up in the entry. His coat was covered with fine silvery drops. His mother heard him stamping his feet and called out:

"Is it snowing, Lewis?"

"No—raining. That blizzard the weather-man promised us must have got sidetracked."

"Yelp, yelp!" came, as if in affirmation.

"For mercy's sake, Lew!" exclaimed Mrs. Reynolds, "what is that noise?"

Lewis came into the living-room with a rather shamefaced grin on his good-looking, boyish face. Cuddled in the crook of his arm was a little, wistful-faced dog with a bandaged paw. As Mrs. Reynolds bent closer to see him, the pup gave her a quick salute, with a moist pink tongue.

She drew back quickly, laughing in spite of herself, and Lewis relaxed a little, feeling that the waif was quite capable of making friends on its own account. He had been a little anxious, fearing that his mother would not have the dog around. But he did not understand that his mother was glad of anything that would make him a little happier and she had not seen him so much like his old self for a long time.

The puppy was established on a soft pillow on the davenport and Lewis and his mother sat on either side while Lewis told her how he had acquired the dog. In the recital some barrier seemed to have given way for the time being and before long they were talking of the broken engagement and Norma Evans.

"Lewis," said his mother softly, "Norma isn't happy. She has tried to become indifferent in her way just as surely as you have in yours. And neither of you have succeeded. Tell me—who was to blame in your quarrel?"

"Honestly, Mother, I don't know. I can't seem to remember what the quarrel was about. Only—we both lost our tempers and said things we didn't mean and then Norma took off her ring and handed it to me and told me to go."

He stopped, remembering how she had looked, her hazel eyes dark with anger, her slight figure tense with pride. How could he know that the flashing eyes were dimmed with tears and the erect form crumpled in a sobbing heap on the couch as the sound of his footsteps died away down the block?

"Lewis—" Mrs. Reynolds paused, looking at her tall son with anxious, loving eyes.

"What, Mother?"

"Would you be willing to accept the blame for the quarrel if Norma would make up?"

Lewis hesitated, looking down at the contented little dog. "Yes, Mother, I would," he said finally. "I never felt this way before. I have just tried to keep myself from caring—"

"But you have cared—"

"Yes, hideously. I believe that if I thought Norma would take me back, I would accept the blame for everything. Somehow this little pup has made me feel different. I know that sounds silly," he said with a deprecatory smile, "but do you remember that little brown and white dog Norma had years ago? She used to call him "Scraps" because he was always aching to start a scrap with some other dog. He was a smart little fellow. Then, one night, they found him lying in the back yard, dead. Someone had poisoned him . . . Norma cried. I felt awfully sorry for her."

He put a caressing hand on the pup's head and the little dog opened one eye sleepily, wagged his tail and then subsided into slumber again.

"Somehow this little beggar reminded me of 'Scraps' and I got to thinking how useless it all was. Here I had been trying for a year to stop thinking about Norma and thought I was beginning to succeed—"

"But not happy—"

"No—not happy. I was annoyed at first to feel obliged to look after him but last night when I went down to see him, he was so tickled to see me that—oh, well." He looked at her a little anxiously. "Mother, you won't mind having him around?"

Mrs. Reynolds smiled. "I don't know much about dogs," she said, "but I'll do my best."

The next day, as is usual with the day before Christmas, was full to overflowing, but in the midst of the morning's busy activities, Mrs. Reynolds yielded to impulse and called up the Evans's number.

"Hello, is this Norma? . . . This is Mrs. Reynolds . . . Mrs. Reynolds! . . . I just thought maybe you could give me a little advice . . . you see, we have a little dog here . . . no, we didn't buy him . . . Lewis nearly got killed by an automobile the other morning" (there was a gasp from the other end of the wire) . . . "No, he's all right, but he stepped back on a little dog's foot and so he thought he had to adopt him—so like Lewis, you know . . . Well, what I called you up for was to ask you what I should feed him . . . I remember you used to have a dog . . . Lewis was speaking of it last night . . . and I thought you could help me out?"

When Mrs. Reynolds hung up the receiver there was a half-frightened, half-pleased look on her face. Norma had promised to run over that afternoon to see the small stranger and impart what she could from her store of information on how to take care of dogs. She called up, later on, to say that she would be unable to come that day but perhaps after Christmas— So Mrs. Reynolds was obliged to be content with that but she was not wholly dissatisfied.

Lewis was not at all happy that day before Christmas. Almost he regretted his last night's confidence to his mother. What was the use? A whole year had gone by. It was not at all likely that Norma still cared for him.

Everyone in the office was busy at the lunch hour buying last-minute gifts. The air seemed full of joyous expectancy. The crowds that jammed the Loop were good-natured. Lewis slipped a bill into the Salvation Army kettle to help "keep the pot boiling" and remarked on the growing coldness to its muffled guardian. Then, in a half furtive way, he slipped into a jewelry shop and came out with a small box in his pocket. He had had the pleasure of buying a gift, anyway, even if he could never present it.

By the time he came out of the office in the evening the streets were a glare of ice and it was with difficulty that he kept his footing. Nearly every house and apartment on the way home from the elevated station had its Christmas tree, glowing with tiny colored bulbs. There was a brightly-lighted tree in his own home, too, a custom his mother had kept up since he was a tiny boy.

HE hardly ate any of the carefully prepared dinner. A lump kept coming up in his throat. Christmas Eve without Norma! How could he get through the evening without disgracing himself? He picked up the little dog and wandered around from one room to another until his mother finally exclaimed, "Do sit down, Lewis; you make me nervous."

"Guess I'll go out for a few minutes," he muttered, "pup needs fresh air."

"He went out without his rubbers," wailed his mother as the door shut behind him. "He's liable to break his neck."

"Oh, he's all right," growled his father. "Let the kid alone. He'll come out of it."

"Much you know about it," retorted his wife. "Would you have 'come out of it' if you had quarreled with me and hadn't spoken to me for a year?"

"Well," returned her husband with a twinkle in his eye, "there's always been plenty of girls—" But he pulled her down on his knee and kissed her with a tenderness that belied his words.

Lewis walked gingerly along the icy walks, hardly conscious that his steps were taking him in the direction of Norma's home. Almost in front of her house he paused. Just then a girlish figure, her arms full of bundles, came around the corner towards him. The little dog barked shrilly to get free. Lewis grabbed at him, pawed the air madly for a moment and then sat violently down on the pavement. At the same moment Norma's feet forsook the walk and she sat down with equal rapidity, directly in front of him.

"Norma!"

"Lewis!"

Then each burst out laughing. All at once the world seemed a glorious place. How wonderful that everyone was celebrating! Lewis marveled at the ice on the walk. That in his heart had all melted and a great freshet of love and longing was overflowing his soul.

He struggled to his feet and then, with trembling hands, helped Norma to regain her equilibrium. It is to be feared that she accepted more of his help that she really needed. But then, even when she was standing, he could not let go of her. "Norma—Norma—" he stammered and that dear, familiar voice, bubbling over with laughter and tears, answered him gaily, if a trifle tremulous: "Bring that little old pup of yours in the house, Lewis. It's all his fault!"

"They's a dog hospital 'round th' corner an' down th' street!" piped a small boy, and Lewis Reynolds, to his own surprise, found himself meekly following his youthful guide.

VICTORY KEEPS ENGLEWOOD AT TOP OF LEAGUE

Brown's Baskets in Final Period Prove Too Much for Auburn M. E.

Englewood Christians maintained their lead in the heavyweight division of the Church Basketball league at the Normal Arts gym Friday by administering an 18 to 16 setback to the Auburn Park M. E. team in a hard fought game. Up to the final minute of play the result was in doubt.

Brown was the outstanding player and it was his two baskets in the final quarter that enabled the Christians to emerge victorious. At the end of the first half Auburn was out in front by a score of 13 to 10. Englewood came back strong in the second session and forged ahead two minutes before the gun.

Ability to elude the Auburn guards aided Brown to make four goals. Stellar work was done by Vail and Fisher for Auburn.

Englewood has not yet been defeated in the league race. The teams will lay off during the holiday season and will resume play on January 9.

REFORMED CHURCH FIVE ROUTED BY MARQUETTE ARROWS IN CAGE TILT

HUSTLERS ALSO GO DOWN IN DEFEAT BEFORE LOCAL QUINTET

Led by Clifford, who dropped six baskets, the Marquette Arrows gained a 28 to 14 decision over the Second Reformed Church of Englewood five in the losers' gym Thursday and added to their laurels Saturday by swamping the Hustlers, 57 to 8, in a onesided affair at the Turner hall.

Clifford's honors in the church game were shared by Rodgers and Byron, who caged four and three baskets, respectively. Each of the church forwards and the center registered two baskets. The game was marked by the absence of fouls.

The Hustlers never had a chance against the locals. From the opening whistle the Arrows eluded their guards and dropped baskets at will. G. Clifford and Rodgers each got eight while W. Clifford and Byron made six ringers apiece.

THORNTON HUMBLED TWICE BY MORGAN IN PRACTICE GAMES

HEAVIES TRIUMPHANT BY 24 TO 17 COUNT; LIGHTS WIN, 18 TO 17

Morgan Park preps won both ends of a double practice bill with Thornton Township high in the latter's gymnasium at Harvey, Ill., Friday. The Hermosa ave. heavies downed the suburbanites, 24 to 17, while the ponies got the edge on the home five, 18 to 17.

Morgan got a late start in the heavyweight tilt and had difficulty in finding the basket. The second half saw a reversal of form and they were more than a match for Thornton.

Coach Davenport's boys had things more their own way than the score of the lightweight game indicates. Their floor work was faster and the team work much better than that of Thornton, but on the strange floor most of their shots in the first period went wild. Thornton had the lead at halftime but there was no question as to the result. Rathje did excellent work at guard.

McKAY AND HANSON INJURED IN CRASH ON BASKET COURT

LOSS OF TWO REGULARS CAUSE OF FRIENDSHIP CENTER'S DEFEAT

Brookline Presbyterians went into a tie for second place in the heavyweight division of the Church league at the Normal Arts gym Friday by administering a 23 to 15 setback to the Friendship Center quintet. McKay of the Presbyterians and Hanson of the Center signal were forced to leave the game as a result of injuries they sustained when they collided. The former suffered a broken nose while Hanson sustained a deep cut over the right eye.

Lilienthal was forced from the lineup by four personal fouls and since it was an off night for Lineweber, Center's star basket tosser, the Friendship five failed to show their usual strength. Powis' shots were spectacular, all three being made from beyond center.

In the first half the game was even, but when Center lost its two best men, the Presbyterians forged ahead easily.

SECOND UNITED STILL WITHOUT A VICTORY

Stepping out in front in the last quarter, Normal Park Presbyterians trounced the Second United church team by a score of 23 to 12 at the Normal Arts gym Friday. The defeat left the losers without a single victory to their credit in the five league games.

Determined to register a win, the Second United five played a whirlwind game during the first half and held the long end of a 9 to 8 count. They were unable to keep up the fast pace in the second round and the Normal Park players went out in front.

PEREZ DEFEATS LA RABIDA IN OVERTIME FRAY

Score Tied at 21 Up At End of Regular Time; Final Count, 27 to 24

Stopping LaRabida in the overtime session, Perez council scored a 27 to 24 win in a Knights of Columbus league game at the Eighth Regiment armory Sunday. The game ended at the regular time with the count deadlocked at 21 all.

The extra period brought out some spectacular playing. The score rolled up faster in this session than in any preceding and the capacity crowd of spectators were kept in suspense to the gun.

Zoblis was the outstanding star of the game, and although closely guarded, he broke away to sink four baskets. Egan was back in his old-time form and made three ringers as did Lewandowski. McMahon led the losers with five baskets. The extremely fast play was responsible for a number of fouls, seven being called on Perez while nine were marked up against LaRabida. The latter five took better advantage of the penalty heaves than did their foes. The losers made six points on free throws and Perez, three.

Half of the gate receipts at the games were donated to the K. of C. Christmas fund.

THOBURN-ENGLEWOOD OVERTIME COMBAT IS FEATURE CHURCH TILT

THYOMIES HELD SCORELESS IN EXTRA PERIOD AND FOES WIN

Featuring the lightweight Church league games at the Lindblom gym Friday was the overtime tilt between the Englewood First M. E. team and the Thoburn Thyomies that ended in a 17 to 11 count in favor of the former five. The Thoburn squad substituted for Olivet M. E. and the combat furnished was the best of any church lightweight tilts seen this season.

Thoburn started slowly, but gradually closed in on the Englewood team. During the first period the Thyomies were blanked while Englewood made four points. Englewood slumped in the third stanza and did little better in the closing session. At the end of the regular time the score was tied at 11-11.

Airtight guarding held the Thyomies in the extra period while Englewood secured the winning margin.

PARKER LOSES AS GAME WITH WALLER ENDS

Rally in Closing Session Enables Northsiders to Overcome Lead

Although they led until the final minute of play, Parker lights were nosed out, 14 to 13, in a practice tilt with Waller on the northsiders' court Tuesday. As the game closed Waller players dropped in a basket and a free throw that earned the victory.

Waller got the jump on Parker at the beginning of the game when Carlson sank a long one. Parker went to the front on three baskets, one by Tell and two by Brooks. Carlson's second basket brought the score to 6-4 in favor of Parker at the end of the first period.

Waller scored two baskets in the second quarter and Brooks registered again bringing the score to 8 all at half time. When Tell and Brooks each counted again while Waller could make only a basket and a penalty heave, the third session ended with Parker in the lead, 12 to 11.

At this stage the breaks went against Parker and Wentworth's shot after a foul brought the Green and White players their lone tally. With about a minute to go Waller sank a free throw on Tell's technical bobble. Quint's basket earned the winning point.

Coach Wasserman's boys made a brilliant effort to win just before the final whistle blew. Capt. Brooks tossed a short shot from underneath the basket which rolled around the rim only to fall out. His spectacular shooting and fast floor work brought the individual honors of the game to Brooks. Tell of Parker and Carlson of Waller also starred.

AUBURN K. C. FIVE TO PLAY McHALE COUNCIL

Following their idleness Sunday, caused by an open date in the schedule, Auburn Park council cagers are expected to show renewed strength on the coming Sabbath when they take on the McHale quintet. A good game is in store as the McHale players have been doing some startling work in the circuit and their recent defeat of Englewood council shows that Auburn will have no easy time. It will be the beginning of a busy season for the teams, for Sunday's games will be followed with combats on New Year's day and then, with only two days' rest, the five will go into action again.

Following are the games of the south section to be played at the Eighth Regiment armory, 35th st. and Giles ave., Sunday afternoon, in addition to the Auburn Park-McHale clash:

LaRabida vs. Aquinas, Perez vs. Calumet, Englewood vs. Loyola-Hyde Park.

The Job of Being A Dad

By FRANK H. CHELEY
President Father and Son League of America

MR. DAD, DO YOU BELIEVE IN BOY TRAINING?

I cannot understand a thinking man today who is not aflame with zeal to see sound, well-grounded boy training go forward with giant strides. There will be skeptics that can tell you just what is the matter with every plan and suggestion. Progress has ever had a goodly number of such chained to its wheels, holding back, applying the brakes, shouting, "Go slowly," "Go cautiously," Go carefully," "We never did it before," "Where is the precedent?"

Every hour and every dollar well spent on any sort of constructive boy training is invested in gilt-edged securities and will pay world dividends. It is not a fad. It is a demonstrated, laboratory-proven, experienced checked poteniality. It costs time; it costs labor; it takes training.

We should be studying this boy question so as to help the home, the church and the school to serve boys better.

I believe in the American home. Of course I do. It's the best home in the world, with all of its faults and failings. There isn't a more intelligent parenthood to be found anywhere than ours, but it is inadequate. Facts and figures show it. Boy life conditions prove it. Ordinarily good homes and ordinarily good dads aren't enough—not nearly enough. We must have better—very much better.

I believe in the American school, too. Ours is the greatest system of free schools in the world today. But you know in your heart of hearts that it is not adequate. It does not function anywhere near 100 per cent for boy life.

I believe in the church, realizing full well that it is oftentimes not considered fashionable to do so. I've listened to its critics until I'm weary. Of course it hasn't come up to full standard—because there are too many in it like you and me. No doubt it has been dogmatic and narrow-minded and perhaps even worldly, but, men, it has made America Christian. I believe in the church, but that does not say I'm satisfied with its effort or its present grasp of the boy situation.

I believe in the American community. I believe it wants the best. I believe there are great constructive forces at work in every community, not always working as closely with each other as they should, but coming nearer to it all the while. I believe there is a deep-seated desire in every American community to see young life developed to the maximum. I'm not unmindful of our commercialized amusements that care little or nothing for anything save handsome profits. I'm not unmindful of the slums and the child labor and the terrible consequences of sex ignorance that are evidenced on almost every side.

Yet we crave better conditions. If we work together and pay the price, we can put into the character of this present generation of youth anything we wish.

BOY, 14, TELLS HOBBY CLUB HOW HE EDITS OWN PAPER

By George R. Cleveland, the WBCN Hobby Man

Hi, there, boys and girls!

Everybody inside the Cave!

Good old Peg Leg's built a fine, roaring fire in the fireplace and everything's cozy. Hurry up, there, Hank and Ned! Be careful of your head when you make a dash through the Cave door. Walt's got a bump as big as a goose egg where he hit his head last week running through.

All right, now; everybody in? Good. Close the door, Peg Leg, and then let's get down to business.

This week's meeting being duly called to order, we will now consider that brilliant young fellow sitting over there on the far side of the circle. Step up, Doug, and let's get a good look at you. At a boy! Come over here by the fire; better light.

Boys and girls of the WBCN Hobby club, I'd like to introduce you to your fellow member, Douglas Peppard, 4057 N. Lincoln st. Douglas has a hobby that he's going to tell you about this week. It's amateur journalism. He's 14 years old and editor of a dandy little monthly magazine called The Blackhawk News; gets it up himself. He told how he does it over the radio at the first air meeting of the club last Friday, December 19. Here's his story:

"For a year I have been editor of an amateur magazine, which I edit myself and print every month. The circulation ranges between 500 and 1,000 copies and I have made all kinds of friends with it and have had loads of fun, and I think I have also learned quite a bit.

"Let's suppose you are interested in amateur journalism and want to start a paper or a magazine of your own. First, you must find a field for your paper—some group of boys or girls and grown-ups that would be interested in subscribing to it. There is always a place for an amateur magazine. It can be the official organ of your Hobby club, or your Scout troop or tribe, or your Sunday school class, or even your class in school. Maybe the fellows and girls in your own neighborhood would like to read a magazine that prints the news of their parties and games and such things. It isn't a bit hard to find a reason for putting out a paper. That is a comparatively simple problem.

"It is especially simple when you consider the next question that you will meet when you start out to establish your magazine. That next question is how you are going to pay for putting it out—where you are going to get the money. My own paper pays for itself out of the subscriptions and the advertisements I get for it. But at the start, the revenue from your magazine will be small, and you will have to pay the expenses out of your own pocket. Then, too, the amount of money you need to begin on depends upon the style of paper you are going to put out. My own magazine is printed like a regular one. I know of other papers, though, put out by friends of mine, that are typewritten on ordinary stationery, and some of them are mimeographed. Supposing you decide to print your magazine, I advise you to have money enough when you start to pay the expenses, of the first four issues. After that your advertising and your subscriptions should bring you in enough to pay the costs and leave a little profit for your bank or your pocket money.

"The printer who prints my magazine charges $6.00 for printing 500 copies of four pages, 6 by 9 inches in size. The first four issues of such a paper would require $24.00 for printing alone, and beside the printing you should have $6.00 or $8.00 for postage if you intend to mail the paper out to your friends.

"It will cost you less, however, if you don't print your magazine, but instead typewrite each copy of it, or mimeograph it.

"It is rather a laborious job, typewriting each copy of your paper, but it can be made easier by using carbon paper. As to the size of a typewritten magazine, I would advise starting out with only two pages; that is, one sheet of paper typewritten on both sides, single-spaced. After you have your typewritten magazine started, maybe you will be able to change it to a printed one in three or four months.

"I have my own paper printed, as I said before, by a regular printer, but if you have a lot of time and mean to publish your paper for a long while, the very best and cheapest way for you to do is buy your own printing press. I didn't do that because I haven't one to three hours a day to devote to printing.

"After you have decided the field you want to edit your magazine for and the way you want to publish it, the next question is who is going to write the stuff you will print. The paper I am editor of is called The Blackhawk News, and it is the official organ of a tribe of Lone Scouts. The Scouts win medals for writing articles for the numerous Lone Scout amateur publications that are edited by boys themselves, so the Scout editors do not have to pay for the pieces they print. That solves my own problem, for the Scouts themselves write most of the material I print, with the exception of the editorials and stories I write myself. If you are going to print a paper that will be the official organ of a Scout tribe or troop, like mine is, then you won't have to worry about getting material to publish, for the members will be glad to write for it and have you print their stuff. If it is a neighborhood paper, you could get the leading men or Scouts of the neighborhood to write for you. If it is a school or Sunday school class paper, ask your teachers and your classmates to contribute stories.

"Then the next point is what you will charge for your paper. If you are going to publish a typewritten or mimeographed paper, I don't think you will get many subscribers, and you might even have to circulate the paper free of charge. If you are going to the expense of printing it, though, then you will necessarily have to charge so you can meet the expenses.

"Of course, you can't become a millionaire on an amateur magazine. After you get going good your paper will only pay expenses and leave a little over. I have edited my magazine a year, and I am a member of the editorial staffs of three others, and I haven't yet found any one who made any money editing an amateur magazine.

"After hearing all this, maybe you will ask what's the good of putting out a paper anyhow? I'll answer you. The good is the experience you get from it. I myself have found that my paper has helped me greatly in my English class in school. If you really enjoy editing your paper, you should be a leader in your English class in school. That's where the good in amateur journalism comes in. It is my hobby and for me it is the greatest hobby in the world."

That's a mighty interesting hobby you have, Douglas, and you have a fine little magazine, too, in that Blackhawk News. Success to you.

I expect that some of the members of the WBCN Hobby club will be starting papers of their own, now that you've told them how.

Any of you young folks who do, be sure to let the Hobby Man know about it. Send in copies of your paper and maybe we'll start an amateur journalists' department, where we can review your papers and give you some suggestions.

But now that Douglas has told us what his hobby is, what's yours? Sit down tonight and write a letter to the Hobby Man, at WBCN, the Southtown Economist, 730 W. Sixty-fifth st., and tell him all about the fun you have collecting things, or making toys or taking pictures with your camera. And by the way, if you're a "camera bug," you might send in some of your best snapshots and maybe we can print them.

The most interesting letters the Hobby Man receives will be printed in the Southtown Economist and read from WBCN Radio Station, at one of the club meetings on Saturday night, at about 7 o'clock.

And by the way, if you haven't joined the Hobby club, here is how you do it:

Clip out the membership application coupon on this page, fill in the blanks properly, write a letter about the hobby you like and why you like it, or, if you have no hobby, but want one, say so, and then mail it all to the Hobby Man.

And those of you who are already members, don't forget that the club is taking a ballot to find out what Hobby is most popular with boys and girls. Send in your vote as soon as possible. Just say what hobby you like best, tell why, and give your name and address. And if you have any suggestions for the coming radio meetings of the club, send them in, too. All welcome.

Adios and a Merry Christmas!

HOLIDAY PROGRAMS TO BE PUT ON BY WBCN DURING PRESENT WEEK

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT TO BE EMPHASIZED IN TONIGHT'S AND THURSDAY BILLS

With the Christmas serenading custom of old as a basis, the Christmas Eve program of WBCN, the Economist's new radio station (266 meters), will be novel as well as dignified and highly entertaining.

The "plot," if such it can be called, of the program shows a group of carolers journeying from house to house and from church to church on Christmas Eve, stopping at each place to sing and play appropriate numbers.

Included in the "cast" are: Elizabeth Kelly, soprano; Alfred Wynterfeldt, concertina player; Adabelle Files, contralto; "Ye Olden Time" trio, consisting of accordion, violin and clarinet; Mrs. Anna Nelson, pianist; Holt Stecht, baritone; Frank Brannick, tamborica player; James Shiel, boy soprano; Jennie Berhenke and Miss Koski, pianists.

From 6 until about 6:30 p. m. the Raster grade school's rhythm band, a musical group of small children, Eileen Keegan, child pianist, and Merrill Fugit, youthful reader, will be heard. Ten o'clock will be the signing-off hour.

The attractions of the Christmas night program are to include the Purple Heron orchestra, the Englewood String Quartet, the Southtown Harmonizers, Miss Forrester, grand oper.. star; Howard Fuller, pianist; Arthur Halfordf, boy soprano; Roy Miller, tenor; Irene Hegner, pianist; Margaret Tuomie, reader; Bernard Schweitzer, tenor, (old time songs); St. Bartholomew's church choir; Alvin director of WBCN. Six o'clock is the starting time for this card, and midnight is hour for signing off.

For Friday

On Friday, the Perkins-Bass elementary school will again stage a children's program fromm 6 until 7 p. m., and R. L. Becktel will do some piano numbers, as will Florence Jones during the regular classical hour (7 to 8). G. P. Graff will sing and Leon Fay is to play the violin as the other classical numbers.

Between 8 and 9, a Christmas cantata will be put on by the First Mennonite choir.

From 9 until 10 o'clock, the W. G. Tegtmeier & Co. Sporting Goods store program will hold forth Lillian French Read, soprano; Cedric Read trombone soloist, John T. Read, vocalist; Cecil Read, cornet soloist, are the artists. A duet by Mr. and Mrs. Read will be a feature.

Saturday

For Saturday, the Purple Herons, a dance orchestra, will start things off at 6 p. m. with a dinner concert of popular selections. From 7 to 8 will be the Fireside Hour, which includes the Hobby club. Banjo James, Etheln Brown Martinson, contralto; Betty Holmes, soprano; Alfred Tweed, harmonica and guitar artist; Al Phillips, Roy Brown, George Forsyth, and George Dell, tenors; Edna McGuffin and Merle Yagle, pianist; will be on the popular bill. From 9 to 12 o'clock, Elmer Jordan and company will sponsor the program.

The Blue Bird Serenaders and the Wonderland Wonders, both ten-piece dance orchestras, will be featured next Sunday evening between 8 and 10 o'clock. During the 7 to 8 classical hour, George D. Rees, considered by many critics to be one of the best Welsh baritones in the middle west; Mary Schnable Wedertz, a violinist of exceptional ability, and C. Gordon Wedertz, organist at Medinah temple and for more than 20 years a member of the faculty of the Chicago Musical college, will be heard.

Rev. White to Talk

On Sunday morning, as usual, Rev. R. A. White, the widely known traveler and lecturer, will talk from the People's Liberal church, of which he is pastor and whose services are broadcast by WBCN between 10:30 and 12 every Sabbath morning.

From 4 until 5 Sunday afternoon, the Lain & Son chapel on W. 63rd st, will be the scene of a classical program consisting of contralto solos by Vella Cook and organ solos and accompaniment by William Duncan Belknap.

Rev. Richard D. Hughes, pastor of the Emerald ave. Presbyterian church and also a lecturer of high repute, is scheduled to talk during the regular WBCN vesper services from his church, between 5:15 and 6:15 o'clock. His subject will be: "Our Friendships."

FAN CLUBS TAKE REST FROM WEEKLY MEETS

Neither the Chicago Radio association nor the Broadcast Listeners' association were in session last week, the former's scheduled semi-monthly meeting being canceled because of severe weather and illness of a principal speaker, and the latter not having had a gathering scheduled.

However, there has been considerable activity in the ranks of the Broadcast Listeners' organization, which is planning to join with other radio clubs in a national combination that will work for the general protection and advancement of the radio public.

Having only a little more than nothing to do, we sat down before our fifteen-tuber last night, prepared to get some real distance. Nothing less than Nome or Rome would satisfy us, so we plied our dexterous fingers with incalculable care and skill. Everything near at hand was passed up with a scornful twist of the dial and twitch of the diaphragm.

So it went for full hawfanour. Then—to our boundless joy, in came something that we felt positive was Italian opera broadcast direct from Rome. Only a few moments of listening and —'Station DK, Cicero, Ill., broadcasting a Czecho-Slovakian program by the Czernicksyckzicy quartet—"

After the mirth of our better half had died away sufficiently to permit the other loud speaker to be heard, we resumed our nocturnal quest, our DX appetite being not one whit dulled by the aforementioned disaster.

Lo and behold! Distance at last! "You are listening now to Station LALA at Paris—" We needed no more, but, rushing into the kitchen, where perspired our disgusted complement, we gasped: "I've got Paris! D'ya hear me? I've got Paris!"

"Are there any style talks on the program?" queried the lady of the house as she executed a neat end run and galloped on into the living room.

We caught up with her in time to hear: "Paris, Ky., signing off—"

After we had recovered from the verbal barrage that followed and, as a parting shot, had hurled "You're another!" in the direction of the kitchen, we tackled the problem once more.

This time it took longer, but finally we tuned in what sounded tremendously like ACHE, Rochester, Minn. Sticking our head deep in the loud speaker, we waited patiently for confirmation of our suspicion, which was founded upon the fact that more whines and howls than usual preceded actual reception of the station.

Then it came: "—last number was sung by Obediah Hoffenspitz from WHEW, Niles Center—"

The only truly long distance reception we achieved that evening occurred when we retired to the front end of the house in an effort to escape the bantering of a hugely amused family.

ON TEGTMEIER BILL FOR FRIDAY EVENING

Photos show John Cedric Read, trombone soloist (top), and Cecil French Read, cornet soloist, who are to play during the W. G. Tegtmeier and company program, from 9 to 10 o'clock Friday evening at WBCN.

Mrs. James J. McLaughlin, 7604 Sangamon st., fractured her leg in a fall on the icy walk Friday afternoon. She is a patient at St. Bernard's hospital.

MANY OWNERS DO NOT KNOW SELECTIVITY OF THEIR RECEIVING SET

MANIPULATION OF REGENERATION DIAL IS OF UTMOST IMPORTANCE

By WALTER J. McDONNELL

With the idea in mind of seeing why so many people find it difficult to separate Chicago stations, the writer spent considerable time during the past two weeks visiting the owners of these allegedly unselective sets, and the findings prove that these people were not really sufficiently familiar with their receivers to do any fine tuning.

In all but a few cases, the sets proved to be as selective as could be desired, and very little trouble was experienced separating local or nearby out-of-town stations.

In many instances the owners ignored the vernier attachments, the fine tuning knobs that control the condensers or tuning coils, on their sets, not thinking it necessary to bring these parts into play in the tuning of local stations.

Again, on regenerative sets, the tickler, or feed-back control, is left set and no attempt made to separate stations by this means. The proper handling of regeneration is an important factor in all tuning operations.

The filament control rheostats can also be used to facilitate correct tuning, and it is the writer's belief that with a little conscientious practice many of these sets can be tuned to select stations at will.

There are some sets that have so much interstage coupling that reradiation occurs in the set and the only way they can be fixed is to relocate the parts in the set.

This is not as expensive as it may sound, as sometimes merely the turning of one coil will do the trick.

Keep your "A" and "B" batteries up and manipulate your rheostats with each tuning operation, and you will find you have a pretty good set after all.

HIS TALKS FEATURES OF VESPER SERVICES

REV. RICHARD D. HUGHES

The Rev. Mr. Hughes will talk for fifteen minutes on the subject of "Our Friendships" as a feature of the 5:15-6.15 o'clock vesper service to be broadcast by WBCN (266 meters) from the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, Emerald ave. and Marquette rd., next Sunday evening. Mr. Hughes is pastor of this church and is known throughout chautauqua circles for his ability and extensive activity as a lyceum lecturer. He will talk over WBCN every Sunday evening during his church's 5.15-5:45 service.

That the introduction of a vesper service by WBCN struck a popular note has been evidenced by a flood of congratulations reaching the Rev. Mr. Hughes and members of the congregation.

TO CO-OPERATE WITH UNITED CHARITIES IN SEASON'S GIVING

LIONS CLUB'S CHRISTMAS CHEER DISPENSED VIA $150 CHECK TO ORGANIZED CHARITY

"Christmas Charity, and Giving Wisely to Needy Families," was discussed by Martin H. Bickham, special representative of the United Charities of Chicago, at the lu heon of the Englewood Lions club Friday noon, at the College cafe.

Mr. Bickham named three types of charity: Personal, organized, and constructive. He spoke briefly upon each type.

"Personal charity is very worthy, but cannot of course be extensive enough to meet the needs in a city the size of Chicago," said the speaker. "Organized or group charity can be a great good or a great evil. It is ofte. misused, and tends to build up false impressions among the poor. They feel that the community is going to care for them without any recompense in service on their part."

Many cases that had been investigated by the United Charities were used to illustrate the points of the talk. According to statements made the prevalent feeling among charity workers is that the distribution of Christmas baskets by so many clubs and organizations without previous investigation tends to break down the morale of the people and make of them beggars.

The Chicago Council of Social Agencies has organized a Christmas bureau. This bureau represents 125 social service agencies, and has the accumulated facts gathered by 15,000 social workers.

"There are 10,655 different families in Chicago who are in real need of help, but a food basket is not going to solve their problem," said Mr. Bickham. "The United Charities investigates conditions in the various families and fills the exact needs of each individual member. The people who receive such aid appreciate it, and those who give toward such a worthy cause feel that they have done a constructive and heart satisfying bit of good.

"The association is trying to help each club to determine which particular families in their vicinity are in need of their aid. In establishing an intimate individual appeal they lead the family out of its dependent condition into self-respect and dependence."

The club voted to give $150 to the United Charities, and through the aid of the organization, will help many needy families in Englewood this week—not with food baskets given indiscriminately to all applicants, but with things that will satisfy the absolute needs of families whose appeals have been investigated and found worthy.

FOUR DAY RUN FOR CARTHAGINIAN SHOW

The Carthaginians finished a four-day run of their first minstrel show last Wednesday. The last performance continued an extra half hour, because of the tremendous applause given to special numbers by John Cunningham, tenor, who rendered classical numbers and folk songs during the intermission, and the singing and dancing of the Jacques sisters, Lumena and Lucille, the Lundquist sisters, Agatha and Agnes, the Balin sisters, Rose and Gene, and Ed Wenig, John Shegrue, Richard Lefebour and Clarence Knight.

The six "end-men" were: Howard Wilbur and Frank Dolan starring, and P. J. Murray, Jean Ward, Clarence Knight and Miss Lillian McGlone supporting them. Ed McCann, who managed and staged the great minstrel, acted as interlocutor.

President Timothy E. Dunne of the Carthaginians has announced that pursuant to their plans for one event a month the troupe is now rehearsing for a musical comedy to be staged the latter part of January. The K. of C. clubhouse at 63rd and Harvard has been reserved for three nights and the stage is being enlarged to accommodate the troupe.

Miss Lucille Jacques, who starred in the recent production of "Kathleen," staged by the Daughters of America, is in charge of the Carthaginian musical comedy.

Joseph Jensen, 6130 Lafin st., well known violinist, will play on Christmas day at 5 and 11 o'clock masses at St. Raphael church, 60th and Justine sts.
